Levin Wilson House
Princess Anne private

c. 1890-1900

Clearly an expensively built dwelling for its period, the Levin Wilson house carries many features not often found on Queen Anne style houses in Princess Anne. The large irregular plan frame residence is distinguished by multiple gables sheathed with fishscale shingles and a two-story semi-octagonal tower that marks the southeast corner. The tower roof is finished with a flame finial, and narrow brick stove stacks rise to each side. Colored glass windows and a wraparound porch are additional Victorian features that provide interest.

Levin Wilson House Description

The Levin Wilson house stands at 514 South Somerset Avenue in the southern residential district of Princess Anne, Somerset County, Maryland. The large Queen Anne style frame house faces east.

Supported by a raised common bond brick foundation, this turn of the century frame house follows an irregular plan and is covered by a modified pyramidal roof of asphalt shingles. The exterior is sheathed with a combination of aluminum siding and decorative fishscale shingles that distinguish the multiple gables. Narrow brick chimney stacks marked by string bands rise from the center of the house.

The east (main) elevation is an asymmetrical facade comprised of a two-and-a-half story projecting bay and a semi-octagonal tower attached to the southeast corner. A front porch, which has been partially enclosed, stretches around the first floor. The principal entrance is located in the north bay and is marked on the front porch by a small pediment. The partially glazed front door is topped by a transom. While the first floor of the gabled bay is covered by the enclosed porch, the second floor is lighted by a large multipane window, and a small arched light illuminates the attic. The adjacent corner tower is also lighted by multipane sash windows, and a flame finial rises from the peak. Fixed between the bay and the tower is a small decorative art glass window.

The side elevations are equally asymmetrical with an irregular placement of doors and windows. The side porch to the south is partially open and remains supported by simple columns with a turned post balustrade between. A side entrance to the south has an adjacent art glass window also.

The back of the house is covered by a large two-story service wing that has a two-story, five-sided bay to the south. Standing behind the dwelling are several frame outbuildings that date to the twentieth century.

SIGNIFICANCE

The Levin Wilson house is one of the more prominent Queen Anne style houses that line South Somerset Avenue in Princess Anne. The irregular plan frame house is distinguished by exterior decorative finishes not found on many town dwellings. Most notable are the semi-octagonal tower with a flame finial and the two-and-a-half story gabled bays that retain their fishscale gables and small round arched attic lights.
